

Abstract of the Disclosure

A method extracts speech recognition features from a speech signal coded as a bitstream. First, the bitstream is decoded to recover linear predictive coding filter parameters, and a residual signal. Then, the linear predictive coding filter parameters and the residual signal are discriminatively combined into speech recognition features.